Visited Military Installation

In the afternoon, walked to Kennelly's and Lighthouse points. At Kennelly's Point, visited the newly established military post which is located on both sides of the road near where the old Kennelly house once stood. On the east side of the road there are 8 round topped corrugated steel huts and on the west side there are 4 or 5 similar ones. These huts are about 25 feet long and 10 feet wide. There are also on the west side two or three wood and tar paper shacks. Near the shore northwest of the old Kennelly house site, there are two wooden buildings erected for the purpose of housing searchlights. One of the lights is in one of the buildings but is not yet in operation. The engines for generating the power for the lights are in a small wooden building in the edge of the woods and east of the searchlight buildings. Two concrete gun emplacements have also been constructed about 50 yards northwest of the Kennelly site and one gun on a rubber wheeled carriage has been mounted.
